DETAILED ACTION

Double Patenting

1. Claim 19 is rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-2 of U.S. Patent No. 6681821. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide the claim 1 as a cover, without the combination with the bat, since eliminating elements is well known in the art. Furthermore, it is known in the art to provide use neoprene as the elastic rubber material to provide the desired material for the cover.

2. Claim 20 is rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-2 of U.S. Patent No. 6681821 in view of Jones (5417354).

Claim 1 meets all claimed limitations except for the graphic display. Jones teaches that it is known in the art to provide a graphic display (col. 8, ln. 13-17). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a graphic display in claim 20 as taught by Jones to advertise the product.

With respect to the bat, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide the claim 1 as a cover, without the combination with the bat, since eliminating elements is well known in the art.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. Claim 19 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zills (4401245) in view of Millis et al. (4989811).

Zills teaches a cover having a first piece of material having first and opposing second edge fastened to form a tubular casing at portion 28 as shown in Fig. 1, and a second end closed off by a second piece at portion 16 as shown in Fig. 2. Note the edge about portion 28 is partially fastened to form a slit at portion 26, and fastening means at portion 30. Zills meets all claimed limitations except for the material being neoprene. Millis teaches that it is known in the art to make a cover from neoprene material (col. 3, lines 60). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to make the cover from neoprene material in Zills as taught by Millis to provide an alternative material for insulation or other properties.

With respect to the cover being used for a baseball or softball, to the degree the bat is not claimed, the cover in Zills, as modified by Millis, meets all claimed limitations. Furthermore, it is regarded as an intended use, and the claimed cover does not impart any structure over the structure in Zills.

4. Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Zills in view of Millis et al., and further in view of Block (5163608) or Moseley (6065764).

The Zills combination meets all claimed limitations except for the graphic display. Either Block or Moseley teaches that it is known in the art to provide a graphic display. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a graphic display in the modified cover of Zills as taught by either Block or Moseley to advertise the product.
